2 Expectations

Discussion section is your chance to get practice working with astronomy ideas. You are expected to arrive ready to openly discuss your reasoning with your group and with me, your TA. I am here to help you learn, and you will learn much more if you participate in discussions and activities. Raise your hand at any time during class to ask a question. You are also welcome to send questions via email.

3 Assignment grading

Exercises assigned in class are handed in to be graded. Each module is due at the start of class 1 week after it is assigned in class. Questions will typically be graded 50% for correct answer, 50% for showing your work or explaining your reasoning. No late work will be accepted.

✓ indicates a correct or approved response;

✗ indicates an incorrect or flawed response.

The work you submit must be your own. No credit will be awarded for copying on reading assignments. Blatant copying on worksheets will result in the awarded points being divided among the number of identical responses. For example, if 4 students hand in identical assignments, each student will earn $\frac{1}{4}$ of the point value for the work submitted. Repeat offenders will be reported for academic misconduct.

4 Participation credit

5% of your overall course grade is devoted to participation in discussion section. Your participation grade is determined using the following criteria:

80%	Attendance and collaboration with group
20%	Leading discussion after in-class presentation

Simply showing up to class on time and working with your group will earn 80% of your participation credit. If you are unable to attend class on a particular day, email the TA of another section at least 24 hours in advance requesting permission to attend, and cc me at mjstyczi@uw.edu. All assignments should still be handed in to me in discussion or lecture. Late work will not be accepted, so hand your work in early if you will be missing class. You may only attend another section one time for participation credit.

Everyone must also give a 2-3 minute presentation on a weekly reading assignment. At the end of your presentation, you'll lead a class discussion. Start your class discussion with a question you submitted with your reading assignment, one you wondered about from your reading. 20% of your participation grade will be based on leading a few minutes of class discussion following your presentation.
